

Dear Church Family,

It was two years ago, 22 March 2020 to be precise, when COVID-19 introduced us to the world of online Sunday services. At that time the beautifully comforting 91st Psalm was a chapter of the Bible that many turned to for solace. It's a wonderful Psalm of God's protection, reminding us that in difficult times God is our refuge. He has indeed been that, and as I look back, I am so thankful for the way the Lord has watched over us with his loving hand of protection over the last two years.

Following yesterday's announcement from our WA Premier, it now seems very likely that we'll be able to meet in person at Booragoon on Sunday morning 3 April, albeit with some restrictions in place. This is really great news, and we look forward to being together once again to worship as a church family. I will send another communication next week which will bring clarity to the specific restrictions to which we will need to adhere for that gathering.

However, for this Sunday morning, 27 March, we will again celebrate Sunday@Home as we have done over recent weeks. We're delighted to have Kathy Sinclair as our guest speaker, and you can access this online service from 8.30am this Sunday morning via this link. And once again, thanks to Mim and her team for providing family activities which you can access here. Our Thornlie church family will be meeting in person for their 9.30am service.

Thanks again for your patience as we carefully navigate our way through current challenges. And a heartfelt thank you to those who have responded to last week's financial update. Your generosity is appreciated. There is still a remaining budget deficit, but I'll bring a further update on Sunday morning 3rd April.

Whoever dwells in the shelter of the Most High will rest in the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, 'He is my refuge and my fortress, my God in whom I trust.'

Psalm 91:1-2

Blessings,

Nick Scott
